

Human Tectonics

The recent events in Haiti triggered a thought. This is not a novel thought but one I felt guided to share with you.

It seems to me that there is this pattern of tension building and then tension releasing that accompanies change. When the Earth's plates try to slide by each other but are unable to do so effectively, what you get is increasing tension. If this tension is released in small doses, mostly harmless tremors are the result. If they are not released in small doses, then the tensions rise until a very large shift occurs breaking the accumulated tension. This release, known as an earthquake is usually much more noticeable because of the destruction it unleashes on the surface.

Most of us have had the experience of entering a situation where underlying tensions were very high, ostensibly because emotional tensions between specific individuals or groups built up to a very high level without release. I recall a situation in a home where two parties were both very angry but unwilling and unable to communicate effectively. What eventually broke the tension was a plate that just seemed to fall off the counter and shatter the tension.

It seems to me that right now, there are tensions between specific groups on our earth and that these tensions have risen rapidly. Perhaps given the nature of this dimension, (one where polarities are the norm) and the current level of consciousness of humanity (rising but not very high), these tensions would inevitably arise at this juncture in human history.

It maybe that the accumulating tensions in the Middle East may need to release themselves in the form of physical violence as it doesn't seem that the opposing parties are prepared, willing or able, to pursue less violent methods of releasing accumulated tensions. In fact it seems they are doing the opposite.

It is my sense that some of the tensions in the Middle East are rooted in unresolved emotional tensions that predate these times. The tensions may go back a long way and it is in this era that those involved in creating those original tensions may indeed be repeating their patterns.

It seems to me that we are unable to put the leaders, who use their negative intentions to increase the already high tensions, in "detention". (Sorry, I could not resist 😊, please forgive me Father and do not "pun'ish me) So we may have some plates shatter in this region in order to lessen the tensions. The good news is that we are entering into a time where consciousness will be higher and perhaps those ancient tensions may not weigh as heavily on us as they did in the past.

Thanks for paying attention 😊
